

Within the Wood

Fire Policy and Procedure

Within the Wood sessions may include the use of campfires and Kelly kettles. This policy outlines the safe use of fire in a group setting

Planning for a fire

Practitioners will:

- Ensure that the landowner has given permission for a fire on the site.
- Be familiar with Within the Wood's Fire Safety Risk Assessment.
- Only plan for a fire activity if they are confident that it is appropriate for the group and there are sufficient responsible adults to do so safely.

Before the session

Practitioners will:

- Check the weather forecast, taking note of prolonged dry spells, strong wind or heavy rain and take appropriate action if this poses a danger. The fire will be cancelled if necessary.
- Ensure fire box, first aid kit, burns kit, fire gloves and enough water to fill a standard-sized bucket are brought to the session.
- Agree the site for the fire and run through a safety briefing with other adults involved.

During the session

Practitioners will ensure that:

- The Fire Use risk assessment is followed including siting of the fire, fire area set-up, fire safety equipment, safety briefing, ratios and supervision and fire extinguishing.
- The fire is appropriate to the size of the group and no more than 1 meter in diameter.
- The fire leader or another Level 3 Qualified Forest School practitioner will always supervise the fire

Procedures for Kelly Kettles are as those outlined above and in the risk assessment for activities.

If procedures are not being followed or for any reason practitioners feel that the fire presents a risk to anyone or anything, the fire will be immediately extinguished.
